

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

Students in our intellectual property concentration investigate key issues relating to patents, trademarks, copyrights, and trade secrets.

These students have an opportunity to develop a firm grounding in a variety of IP fields by exploring diverse topics that include trademarks & copyrights in the digital age, computer and internet law, patent litigation, sports law, and video game law.

They also have an opportunity to participate in an externship within a law firm or corporate legal department to gain practical experience regarding the types of intellectual property work that lawyers do, and to gain hands-on insight in regard to protecting the creative works of artists, musicians, and inventors.

IP-related courses taken at other law schools or in other QU departments may be counted for up to six credits toward the IP concentration certificate with the approval of the concentration director.

1. Writing Requirement

Students must write a substantial paper—or a series of shorter papers that together comprise the equivalent of a substantial paper—on a topic or topics related to intellectual property.

To qualify for substantial paper credit, the paper must be submitted to the concentration director for review.

2. Opt-Out Option

A student may designate any course or paper as not counting toward the concentration, so long as it is not required for the concentration and the student meets the concentration requirements with another course or paper.

3. Waiver

The concentration director and the associate dean for academic affairs may waive any requirements for the concentration if they agree to do so.
